every year, Egypt tests about 150,000 people, mostly young men, who must show they aren't infected with HIV to get visas to work in Persian Gulf countries.

Doctors fear they could also be marketed at women who purely wish to spice up their sex lives. With other health problems my not take advantage of the procedure and their condition could really become